

Caroline Markolin, Ph.D.

Caroline Markolin received her doctorate in German literature from the University of Salzburg, Austria. After she moved to Canada in 1987, she taught German Language and Literature at Concordia University in Montreal. During her academic career, she published numerous books and essays on contemporary Austrian literature. In 1998, she resigned from her academic position as tenured Associate Professor and began to pursue her strong interest in naturopathic medicine.

In 1999, during a visit in Austria, she attended her first GNM lecture. Captivated by Dr. Hamer’s scientific findings, she enthusiastically dedicated herself to the full-time study of the “New Medicine”, as it was still called then. In 2002, after extensive and diligent immersion in the available GNM research material, she met Dr. Hamer and began to study under his guidance. In recognition of the in-depth knowledge of his work, Dr. Hamer entrusted her with the English translation of the Scientific Chart of German New Medicine®, published in 2007.

Caroline Markolin is devoted to make Dr. Hamer’s discoveries available to the English-speaking world through her teachings and her presentation of German New Medicine (GNM) on this website.

“With his revolutionary medical discoveries Dr. Hamer has given mankind one of the greatest gifts. It is the WORK (The Sacred Medicine) that empowers me to educate the public as well as health practitioners in the science of GNM and to secure the authentic research for future generations.”

Source: www.LearningGNM.com